Overview

Jonah Fritz is an associate attorney in the firm's Dallas office. His areas of practice include commercial litigation as well as transactional matters for the firm's construction, business, and real estate clients. What sets Jonah apart from other attorneys is his unique perspective of growing up in a family of general contractors, where he developed a passion for understanding and working with construction and real estate development issues.

Prior to joining Griffith Davison, Jonah worked as a Fall Extern for The Beck Group supporting their In-House General Counsel with various construction-related matters. While finishing his Juris Doctor degree, Jonah completed multiple intern and externships including a Judicial Externship for Chief Justice Bonnie Sudderth in the Texas 2nd District Court of Appeals.

Jonah received his Juris Doctor from Texas A&M University School of Law, where graduated cum laude and served as Senior Staff on the Texas A&M Journal of Property Law. Prior to law school, he received his Bachelor of Arts in Political Science from Texas A&M University. Outside the office, Jonah's interests include playing men's softball and watching Texas A&M football. He is also an avid fan of the outdoors where he enjoys hunting, fishing, and hiking.
